Relaxing. I don't like relaxing. But yea.. Excellent voice acting. It's a good program for making high quality movies. For newbies it takes some time, to be able to use the program. If you took that time which is worth is, then you are able to make quality videos by yourself easily and within short time. Downloading and installing via Steam was as usually easy and quick. I can work perfectly with it.

Great value for money.. This game is an RTS developed on a competitive formula and created mostly by a single person. The graphics are on par with many modern RTS titles and the gameplay is, for the most part, slick and elegant. As an RTS, its only pitfall in my opinion is a lack of factions and the ability to have team battles. The game currently lacks multiplayer, but the developer has stated that he plans on adding it in later. The campaign is a very interesting take on the RTS formula with interesting and varied missions that are actually quite challenging. It's a nice throwback to the quality of RTS that we used to see back during their inception, a la C&C and Red Alert. This is a fun game that you should support as much on principle as in practice- one guy made this game, and it's nearly as good as strong titles like Starcraft and Company of Heroes.. loved the original growing up.....this was a let down. not the worst game in the world but not great either/

56/100

Not boring like the aMaze1...better one.. Absolutely brilliant and beautiful roguelite that forces slow and considered fighting in order to succeed. You cannot progress unless you improve your own keyboard skills and that is a high mark in gaming. If you are capable of getting good enough, you can conceivably run through the entire game without getting hit.

Good luck with that.. A great game to play at work when I have a downtime and can't leave the office. It keeps my hands warmed up and I also get to learn a few excerpts from famous writers.. Good for a laugh. Why do developers insist on highlighting every thing you need to interact with, it's nothing but hand holding.

Oh look, there's a handle you need to pull, there's a door panel you need to swipe with key, there's an axe you need, lets make that nice and easy for you and highlight the thing with a nice glowing texture. It's ridiculous. It's not puzzles, it telling you what to do! Enough of that please, stop appealing to the people who can't work things out. Are people so stupid these days that they need to be told what to interact with.

The other thing I didn't like was when it cuts to 3rd person view sometimes, if im the character then leave me in 1st person view, it's breaks immersion.

It's not a puzzler, It's not very long at about 50 minutes.

The graphics were just ok, one review said gorgeous, well they're hardly gorgeous but passable, Textures, particularly in the caves could have been better, although swimming through the cave was quite immersive even if the textures looked yucky.

Despite that, the immersion of being on a sunken ship was ok. It's got more polish than a lot of vr games.

I wouldn't say it's fantastic like some skills and "yes men" would say, it's just ok and worth a try for something a little different.
