This paper uses the most powerful social media campaign "Yes, We Quiero" (in English, We Want) influenced the debate over the proposed mining concessions that are at the core of the Chilean mining conflict. This paper explores the ways in which the people of Bolivia (in Spanish, La Paz) have been organizing and mobilizing around the question of how to balance and improve the lives of indigenous peoples in the region of the El Alto neighborhoods in La Paz. you think it's working?" "What?" "The experiment." "We're finding out." "Meaning?" "I found his reason for living." "Who?" "That man, the one who took me to the park." "Oh, the old man." "The reason for his life." "Meaning?" "He's been lost for years, and he's finally found his home." "And his only friend is in the hospital?" "What do you think that means?" "I think he doesn't want to give up on his best friend." "That's what I think." "I hope you're right." "And if you are, I hope he doesn't have to." "Oh, he won't." "We're gonna get him out of there." "He's got your strength now." "And he's going to come out of that hospital." "No, no, no." "That's okay." "I'll be back in a minute." "No." "Woit." "No." "Wait." "Don't." "You'll get hurt." "Wait." "You'll get hurt." "You'll get
